

About the Seminar:

Humane race has excelled through the ages with talent and will. In the modern times, the definition of progress has got changed through knowledge power which has churned out a workforce with the help of advancement of science and technology. New horizons of human excellence are emerging day by day. The entire educational system of our country is in the process of change. Speed of technological developments and speed of change are phenomenal. India too has witnessed these changes and is pacing ahead. Despite development lagging in some of the areas, India is addressing itself to the need of becoming a part of the global community. These change-processes that have accelerated in tandem over the past few decades have created a new horizon to think over the policy perspectives and emerging issues in education in general and especially in higher education in particular so that we can create new grounds for betterment and sustainable development of the society.

Needles to say that the present Indian higher Education is at the crossroads, in spite of the fact that independent India began its journey in the field of education with "University Education Commission" headed by eminent educationist, Dr. Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan. Since Independence the Government of India has realized dreams and opportunities to strengthen the future education of the country. Many policies were framed and many more implemented and still the process is in progress. Recently, the present government has indicated that the long awaited new national education policy is ready to finally see the light of the day. It is right time to draw the roadmap of higher education and its emerging issues needed to be addressed to aware the policy planners and implementers as well.

Higher education has long been recognized as a major contributing factor to the socio- cultural and intellectual life of society by improving the quality of human life. The actual task of contemporary higher educational institutions is to narrow the gap between research and academic studies through a research based approach to education by creating environment that includes vital integration of research activity and academic studies. Higher education in India is confronted with serious challenges and these challenges have to be met, needless to say, without deviation to make higher education more meaningful and purposeful so as to achieve the basic objectives underlying it. The major challenge before Indian Higher education is to create new strategies based on policies and programmes visualized and prioritized by the academia and government. Massive expansion of opportunities for higher education with equal importance to enhance the quality of education in every sphere is another big challenge. Indian Education Commission has rightly said: "Unless we know whither we are tending, we cannot decide what we should do and how we should do it." We are having utter need of creating institutions that are exemplars of excellence. Higher Education needs a clear frame of purpose to make it more meaningful and effective. Therefore, the proposed seminar would explore the policy prospects and emerging issues of higher education by having the intelligentsia of academic world. Keeping in mind all these aspects, you all are invited to churn out and discuss on the burning topic: Policy perspectives and emerging issues in Higher education.
